Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Journal of Franklin Institute of the State of Pennsylvania and Mechanics Register, Vol. 25: Devoted to Mechanical and Physical Science, Civil Engineering, the Arts and Manufactures, and the Recording of American and Other Patented Inventions Dr. Hare, no doubt unintentionally, entirely misstates my views, when he says that I think it expedient to have it enter near or through the floor. This represents me as writing nonsense - for do I not speak distinctly against letting it pass through a hole or grate in the floor? and surely this would be near or through the floor. The principle that I want to establish is, that the flues or pipes by which the heated air passes off from the heat-chamber, into the apartment to be warmed, in whatever direction they be carried under and through the floor, should not terminate there, but pass above the floor, and there have a horizontal direction, (or parallel with the floor) to some extent, before they terminate. What specific length this horizontal branch should have, it would require many experiments to establish. My horizontal branches were six inches long, as stated in my essay. When I spoke of giving this horizontal direction to the hot air, whilst it was yet in a constrained passage, I thought that if my language was not sufficiently explicit, that the apparatus which I applied and described, would make it plain enough - at any rate, it was intended to convey what I have now in other words described above. The momentum or force which I contend the heated air has, when it issues from the heat-chamber - and which I say so powerfully contributes...
